Roxbury, March 29, 1877.

Dear Mrs. Bush:

Thanks for your kind invitation to Frank and myself to attend an amateur musical entertainment at your home on Monday evening next. "The man that hath not music in his soul," &c. We shall endeavor to be with you, not simply to prove that we are loyal, but because of our desire to improve every convenient opportunity to listen to "the concord of sweet sounds." Should the weather prove inclement, I may reluctantly feel obliged to forgo the pleasure, as the state of my health requires me to be careful to avoid any unnecessary exposure.

Yours, most harmoniously,

Wm. Lloyd Garrison.
